Join us November 1 for a mini-workshop that builds upon the success of the original C4C to offer opportunities for the growth and improvement of existing partnerships, and encourage a broader dialogue about the greatest potential and impact of collaborative conservation efforts. This mini-workshop will lay the groundwork for a larger, more in-depth workshop next spring (2018).

When: Wednesday, November 1, 9:00 am - 3:00 pm

Where: Fort Lewis College, Ballroom
1000 Rim Drive, Durango CO

Who should attend: Anyone interested in developing or deepening partnerships around natural, cultural, and environmental education, conservation, research, and management on a landscape scale.

Why: Since the original C4C, natural and cultural conservation and education partnerships that cross geographic landscapes and ownership boundaries have exploded in SW CO, resulting in amazing opportunities - and complicated issues.

What is the workshop about: This workshop will bring people together to address issues related to growing partnership numbers, take new efforts to the next level, and leverage existing efforts to benefit individual and collective partnerships alike.

You will:

- Identify opportunities to leverage current partnership efforts
- Identify conservation concerns/ issues
- Strengthen existing partnerships
- Network, network, network
